Treasure Maps Laid to Acts Of Pranksters

PHILADELPHIA. — The yen to prospect for buried pirate treasure is definitely on the up-trend, according to evidence available here-about. Men with mine detectors roam New Jersey and the shores of Delaware bay bear signs of the correctness of the conclusion.

So far, as anyone knows, no one has come up with any buried coins or ingots or jewels, but digging is going on apace. The only portent of anything buried has been an old iron pot or some other unmarketable find. However, that hasn't dimmed the lure of pirate gold and the searchers continue on undiscouraged.

Dr. Henry C. Beck, an expert on pirate lore, is of the opinion that the men who are lugging the mechanical detectors around have about as much chance of locating treasure as the plain pick-and-shoulders of 250 years ago. In fact, Dr. Beck is rather cynical on the subject, for he adds that the chance he mentioned is practically no chance at all. There is, he said, no record that anyone anywhere has ever recovered any pirate gold.

Cites Boy's Example

He advises the hunters to follow the example of Joseph Dowling Jr., 11, and wander the Jersey coast with the idea Joseph had—"just looking for things."

Joseph is the Philadelphia boy who brought home what amounted to a peanut bag full of 18th century coins (gold content uncertain) and a pile of buckles and cuffs.

"But as for the buried treasures of Captain Kidd, Lafitte, Teach or any other bucaneers whom fact or romance brought to these shores," Dr. Beck advises, one might as well forget it.

The reason is simple. Kidd, Lafitte, Teach and the less notorious pirates thought too much of themselves to bury their wealth.

"By far the greatest number of them did not die on the gibbet," he said. "They vamoosed from the business after they'd made their pile and went to various other parts of the world where they lived out their lives in ease."

Nevertheless, reports of buried treasure persist. One reason, Dr. Beck thinks, is that even as now the world of buccaneer days had its practical jokers.

Pranksters Busy

"They'd drop maps with the familiar skull and crossbones in places where they would be found," he said, "and then sit back to enjoy the uproar."

One such hoax led to the first large scale treasure hunt Dr. Beck has been able to trace. It occurred at Cape May, N. Y., in 1701. When the hunters learned they had been fooled, they saw to it that the pranksters were jailed.

If any pirate gold is to be found hereabouts, Absecon island would be a likely spot, Beck concedes. Unfortunately, the island is now occupied by Atlantic City and the best beach front sites for digging are under ton upon ton of resort hotels.

The Absecon islanders of the early 18th century were themselves practicing—if land based—pirates. Pirating was their industry. Their only equipment was a donkey and a lantern. On stormy nights ships beating their way along the coast would be misled by a lantern tied to a donkey's tail. The donkey would be prodded along the beach in the direction of Brigantine shoals and the ship's master, having no other bearing, would be lured by the light on the shoals.

Harvard Law College Finally Lifts Bars On Female Students

CAMBRIDGE, MASS. — At long last, starting in the fall of 1950, the Harvard law school, traditionally masculine in all its 132-year-old history will open its classes to qualified women applicants.

"Women have come a long way in the law since they were first admitted to membership in the American Bar association in 1918," said Dean Erwin N. Griswold in announcing the decision to admit women students.

"Opportunities for women in the law are still limited," he added, "and the faculty is well aware that many able men are turned away from our doors every year. It is our expectation that we will admit only a small number of unusually qualified women students for the present, at least."

Candidates for admission to the school must be college graduates.

As a result of the law school's decision, all branches of scholarship are now open to women at Harvard university.

The Harvard medical school conferred the M. D. degree on a woman for the first time last June.

The graduate school of business administration does not admit women, but the management training program at Radcliffe college, under the direction of Harvard business school faculty members, provides graduate training for women in business administration and personnel work.

The Harvard divinity school accepts no women as candidates for degrees, but they may study the history and philosophy of religion there.

About 1,350 women who have studied in graduate schools are among the 90,000 Harvard university alumni.

Harvard law school, founded in 1817, is one of the last law schools in the country to admit women.

Surgeon General Warns Of City Smog Dangers

WASHINGTON.—Polluted air, pinned motionless by unusual weather, was what turned a creeping fog into a wagon of death at Donora, Pa., a year ago, and that same danger faces many industrial cities, according to U. S. Surgeon General Leonard A. Scheele.

Scheele's report for the federal public health service was the first disclosure that the effect of the poisoned air had made 6,000 people ill at Donora and had been so widely felt. Accounts at that time told of 20 deaths and said only a few hundred persons had been made ill.

Scheele said Donora probably had another serious smog period in April, 1945, as "there were twice as many deaths in the town as in any ordinary April or any ordinary month."

And he warned that the circumstances could occur in Donora again or in any other highly industrialized areas. To prevent this he recommended that fog afflicted industrial centers keep a close watch on weather conditions, and industrial plants be curtailed or shut down when smog conditions appear to be developing, in order to reduce sharply the contamination of air.

Radio 'Voice of America' Takes on Juke Box Accent

NEW YORK.—The "Voice of America's" newly-acquired "juke box" accent is highly popular in the faraway places. Sometimes the "voice" is Bing Crosby. Sometimes it's Frank Sinatra.

Anyway, the state department's international broadcasting service has been pumping up American popular music as an experiment and it looks like disk jockey Martin Block has hit the international jackpot. His fan mail would drive a stamp collector into a frenzy.

The "voice" sort of backed into the popular field in a big way several months ago and Block volunteered his services. A weekly half-hour program was beamed to Europe, the Far East and Latin America.

Block runs his program in strict disk jockey style, with lots of gags and chatter about musicians. But no commercials—this is Uncle Sam's sustaining program.

Before long Block was getting more fan mail than any other "voice" program—and some of the writers were real gone guys and gals.

There was the girl in Assam, who wanted "Buttons and Bows" and the young German who asked for the "Two o'Clock Jump."

A catholic priest from Panama wrote that Bing's voice seems up to par, and Medeline from Martinique wants someone to write music for her lyrics.

The "voice" doesn't report any letters from behind the iron curtain—where the Russians have been holding some all-wave jam sessions of their own. But Block isn't worried. It'll take more than jamming to comb that man right out of their hair.

Modern Medicine Has Little Knowledge Of How to Curb Colds

CHICAGO. — Modern medicine, which slays germs by the billions, is still without an effective weapon of attack against the common cold. No less an authority that the American Medical association makes that statement.

In its journal, the association contended that patent-medicine makers don't know the answer Nor do those folks who are always so ready to ply the cold sufferer with advice.

Apparently you just can't cure it at all. It simply runs its course and all the individual can do is make the best of a bad situation.

The journal's consultant says in his article, however, that it's a pretty safe bet the best way to ease a common cold attack is to go to bed and rest there.

There are a few ways, he said, to ease cold symptoms temporarily. And it seems well established, the article said, that an oncoming cold can sometimes be aborted by "reasonable doses" of alcohol. It was explained this is because it "causes peripheral vasodilation and reestablishes circulation in chilled cutaneous and mucosal surfaces."

In other words, it brings a rush of blood into cold skin or nose lining.

So, when a doctor does something for your cold, he just eases the acute symptoms, such as headache (with aspirin), and burning sensations in the nose or throat (by moisture with steam inhalations, or common table-salt solution syringing.)

But the "sane and effective measure" is to stay warm and relaxed in bed, especially if fever is present. It "diminishes the severity of the common cold, limits its spread to others, and reduces the frequency of complications."

Nose drops? Careless? Volatile inhalers? Diet? Water-drinking? Salves, the journal says, their benefits generally exaggerated in conversation and advertising.
